EXECUTIVE LEADERSHIP PROGRAM

Congratulations to Paul Athey on his completion of the Department of Administration's South Carolina Executive Institute

- The South Carolina Executive Institute is dedicated to preparing executive leaders for the rigors of the responsibilities inherent in public service organizations.
- The interactive program, facilitated by industry experts, will empower participants to lead their organizations more effectively. The skills honed through the South Carolina Executive Institute will result in value for those who depend on the services participant's organizations deliver. Participants will work closely with executive leaders from around the state and build trusting relationship, address complex problems and gain insight into successfully moving their organizations into the future.
- The South Carolina Executive Institute meets six times over the course of seven months, offering thought-provoking and rigorous curriculum. Participants commit to learning, growing professionally and applying new knowledge in their areas of work throughout the program and their work careers.

RETIREMENT

Geoffrey Johnson – GIS Manager II, Mapping and Operations

- Began State service in April 1998.
- Filled in for the State GIS Coordinator position on two separate occasions to maintain continuity of service.
- Geoff is a weather enthusiast and even has his own weather station in his backyard (the office considered him to be our unofficial weather person).

EDUCATION AND WORKFORCE REPORT (§59-18-1950, H.3969)

Longitudinal Data System Measurement (c):
The number of high school graduates who are gainfully employed in the State within five and ten years of graduating from high school

- Key Findings:
  - The vast majority of graduates experience some employment and earnings post-graduation.
  - First year employment is increasing which coincides with the decrease seen in postsecondary education enrollment.
  - 5-year employment increased for the first time in 6 years.
  - Median wages for employment in the 5th year after graduation are similar to the statewide median income (American Community Survey) while wages in the 1st year after graduation are considerably lower. This could be contributed to work experience or obtainment of a college degree.
  - Higher levels of employment and wages are found in the longer, ten-year time period.
